The Department of History, Arts and Libraries was created under Act 63 of 2001 — the History, Arts, and Libraries Act — to combine and coordinate state efforts to preserve, promote, and protect Michigan's heritage. Knowledge of history, the arts, and culture and access to information resources are vitally important in today's world, and the department's strong focus on state history, arts, culture, and library programs is designed to enhance the lives of Michigan citizens.

The Library of Michigan, formerly known as the State Library, was transferred in 2001 from the legislative branch of state government to the Department of History, Arts and Libraries in the executive branch by amending Act 540 of 1982. The library is primarily charged with providing reference services to the legislative branch of state government and, in addition, providing reference services to the executive and judicial branches of state government and to the general public. Its main location is at 702 West Kalamazoo in Lansing (373-1300). The Law Library (373-0630) is located on the first floor of the G. Mennen Williams State Office Building, west of the Capitol. The state librarian, who is appointed by the governor, in consultation with the Board of Trustees and with the advice and consent of the senate, is the chief administrator of the Library of Michigan. Nancy Robertson is the Acting State Librarian.
